FOREX: Ringgit Ends At 7-Month Low Against Greenback

By Zairina Zainudin

KUALA LUMPUR -- The ringgit closed at a seven-month low against the US dollar Friday as the greenback strengthened over the US-China trade tension, curbing appetite for the local currency, dealers said. At 6 pm, the ringgit closed at 4.0800/0850 against the greenback versus 4.0740/0780 Thursday. A dealer said the US dollar appreciated versus a basket of other currencies, taking advantage on the escalating US-China trade war dispute, with the former threatening to increase import tariffs to 25 per cent from 10 per cent on US$200 billion in Chinese imports. The greenback uptrend was also supported by the US Treasury yields, coupled with the expectations of a bullish US jobs report, thus lifting risk appetite for the safe haven currency. "The US dollar's gains impacted the ringgit sentiment," the dealer told Bernama. Meanwhile, the ringgit was traded higher against other major currencies. It appreciated against the Singapore dollar to 2.9770/9811 from 2.9805/9838 on Thursday, and rose versus the Japanese yen to 3.6523/6574 from 3.6528/6574. The local currency strengthened against the British pound to 5.3064/3146 from 5.3284/3352 and increased vis-a-vis the euro to 4.7222/7292 from 4.7303/7358 Thursday.

What You Need To Know About Electricity Tariffs

KUALA LUMPUR (Bernama) -- There may be those who are still unclear or do not understand what are tariff, tariff rate adjustment, rebate, and surcharge as well as how these are related to the electricity bill. Here are some major questions on electricity tariffs that are answered below:

Q: Is it true that electricity tariffs were increased from July this year?

A: Not true. The average base tariff will remain at 39.45 sen/kWh until December 2020. Accordingly, the tariff rate for every consumer category, whether residential, commercial or industrial, will remain unchanged until December 2020.

Q: What is tariff rate adjustment?

A: Tariff rate adjustments are carried out every six months based on the actual cost of generating electricity. The Energy Commission (EC), the statutory body that regulates electricity tariffs, adjusts the rates using the Imbalance Cost Pass-Through (ICPT) mechanism. ICPT is part of the new electricity policy appraisal framework known as the Incentive-Based Regulation, which has been implemented since January 2014.

Q: How are rebates and tariff rate adjustment connected?

A: During the half-yearly review of the cost of generating electricity, the actual costs are studied and compared with the base tariff costs set. When fuel costs fall, the cost reduction will be passed on to the consumers in the form of an ICPT rebate.

However, when fuel costs escalate, the additional cost needs to be passed on to the consumers in the form of an ICPT surcharge.

REBATES

Q: How many times have the people in Peninsular Malaysia enjoyed rebates?

A: Rebates have been given seven times during the first seven ICPT cycles (from March 2015 to June 2018). The rebates, given to all categories of electricity users, amounted to RM6.3 billion.

Q: What is a surcharge and how is it related to tariff rate adjustment?

A: A surcharge is imposed when the fuel and electricity generation costs increase. This happened recently when global coal prices jumped while the value of the ringgit weakened.

This resulted in imported coal, paid for in US dollars, to soar in prices. Natural gas prices for electricity generation also continued to rise due to lower gas subsidies under the gas subsidy rationalisation programme. This has raised the fuel cost for power generation in the peninsula.

SURCHARGE

Q: Why did the EC announce a surcharge (for July to December 2018)? Why are consumers no longer enjoying rebates?

A: Since July 2017, the power generation and fuel costs have exceeded the cost approved by the government under the base tariffs. This cost increase cannot be fully absorbed (in the form of rebates). Nonetheless, the government has decided to use funds from the Electricity Industry Fund (EIF) to offset part of the cost for the July-December 2018 period. A large portion of the fund originated from savings achieved from the renegotiation of power purchase agreements with the first-generation independent power producers (IPPs).

However, the government can only spend RM114 million of the EIF's monies to ensure the 7.1 million residential users (81.7 per cent of Tenaga Nasional Bhd customers) do not have to pay the electricity surcharge. This is to ensure that the rest of the fund can be used for the upcoming ICPT cycle.

Hence an ICPT surcharge of 1.35 sen/kWh is imposed on customers in the industrial and commercial categories (other than residential customers).
